

In a season of embellished looks, we still want modern winter wear, uncomplicated accessories that warm while staying kicky. Houston designer Magda Sayeg's handmade wool scarves sprang from her self-professed love of "whimsical shapes and forms." (Her pals joke the patterns may have originated from Sayeg's fascination with nubby construction paper.) Scarves resemble candy-colored Tinker Toys or mod circles in neon and pastel hues. From $75. In addition to her design business, Sayeg and her husband, Daniel Fergus, own Mixture gallery, where she plays hostess to a weekly winter market. Here, vendors display their homespun jewelry, clothes or handbags. And recently Sayeg's more permanent boutique, Raye, opened next door. Market dates: December 5, 12 and 19.—Jennifer Yee

Available at Raye, 2608 Dunlavy, Houston, 713.550.6533. Dunlavy Street Craft Market, 1709 Westheimer, Houston.